50 [illegible] OF THE [illegible] [illegible] New York [illegible]

BANGOR.

SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1838.

Arrival of the Steam Ships Sirius in 18 days, and the Great [illegible] in 15 days from England. The following articles from the New York Star and the Daily Express, will be read with interest, as establishing beyond all doubt, the practicability of trans-Atlantic Steam Navigation. The average period in which the packet ships have performed the voyage for a few years past may be stated at 30 days. The distance which separates Europe from America has been reduced one half by this great and decisive Experiment. Considering the adverse winds which prevailed during the voyage, 15 days may be considered the ordinary period in which the Atlantic will be crossed by Steam.

This vessel reached Sandy Hook last night and came up this morning and anchored off the battery, where she now lies. The announcement of this desired event flew like wildfire through the city, and crowds of persons, from an early hour, have been thronging to the battery; and the small craft of the Whitehall boatmen have never had more active employment — hundreds flocking off in them to the great lion of our waters. We hastened down with the moving mass of population to the battery, and soon saw the gallant streamers of the noble ship gleaming in the bright sunshine — the star-spangled banner at the foremast and Brittania's standard hanging over the stern. Every body was struck with the noble bearing of this craft — her ship-like aspect, though longer than ordinary ships for her bulk, and the neat rig of her masts — in fact, she is a perfect sea-boat. She is painted deep black, except the light green taffrail on the quarter and the gilding about the stern, and the paddles and shafts of the rim, and apparently [illegible] of the wheels, which are red and of iron, but nevertheless not in the slightest degree injured apparently, which, to look at them seems astonishing, considering what billows the ship has waded through, and what heavy gales she has encountered. Neither is the roof of the round house robbed apparently of a single plank.

The vessel stopped but one hour in the whole voyage, and that was on the banks of Newfoundland during a heavy gale, and in order to fasten a screw. Never laid to once during the whole voyage.

The ship's company is forty, exclusive of the Captain, Lieut Richard Roberts, Royal Navy, Mr William Ramsen, superintendent of the Engineers. The seamen are all English; the firemen Irish, Scotch and English, the rest are servants, &c. Passengers 40. Five ladies in the first cabin from London and Cork, four in the second cabin, a number of gentlemen, two schoolmasters three artists, and several mechanics. During the whole course, never shipped a sea, never had the least apprehension of any danger; consumed 400 tons Welch (bituminous) coal, and have a supply on hand, never cleaned the boilers, the machinery worked beautifully during the gales, and Samuel Hall's condensers and improved engines, which were used, fully and completely sustained the high opinion entertained of them. No accident occurred.

The passage of the Sirius would have been at least four or six days less, but for the heavy gales shortly after leaving Cork, and the constant westerly winds for all the first half of the voyage, with a dead, heavy, confused sea, and especially during the two days severe weather on the Banks.

The engine of this ship is entirely out of sight, and the pipe, which is painted white, with a black top, and solid and broad, does not reach over twenty feet above deck, standing as firm as when she left port. The wheel-house does not come much below the gudgeon, leaving, therefore, the paddles and the light iron frame-work of spoke and rim, to which they are attached, open to sight. The paddles rise each in form of a flight of three steps, each step narrow.

It was announced about one o'clock, by Telegraph, that the steam ship GREAT WESTERN was off the Hook, when additional thousands poured down Broadway; and the battery at 2 P M presented a most brilliant appearance. The crowd reminded one of the landing of the Nation's Guest, "Lafayette," and there was an increase of its numbers till 4 P. M. The smoke of the Great Western was seen in the horizon ascending in black volumes long before her hull was visible. The ship, however soon came in sight, and as she passed Bedlow's Island, received a salute from the Fort of 26 guns. She approached the Battery through a fleet of row boats and small craft sprinkled over the surface and was cheered apparently by every one. She soon ranged along side the Castle, sailed round the Sirius, which vessel gave her a salute, when the crowd from the wharves, Castle, boats, &c gave her three hearty cheers, which was returned by those on board. She then pursued her course up the East River and came to anchor near Pike Street. This successful experiment, and this new era of Steam Packets between this and England, gave life and joy to all.

These Steam Ships are not the first which have crossed the Atlantic, American, as well as British Steam Ships, having before made the passage, but these ships are Pioneers, in a new business, and are the first to promise to begin a regular trade. Thus they shorten all our ideas of the great distance over the Atlantic Ocean, and abridge, as it were, time and space. What attaches to the arrivals so much extraordinary interest, is the new era established in Steam Navigation, being one of those great events in the history of human advancement, which, if less remarkable than the discovery of America by Columbus, is nevertheless highly important on account of the close connexion it establishes between the Old World and the New, between the great cities of the United States, and the great cities of Europe.

But what attaches to it much importance in our eyes as New Yorkers, also is, that while we see our sister cities but beginning an imitation of our beautiful packet ships, we are shooting ahead of them again in the beginning of steam navigation over the ocean, and thus linking by a steam ferry as it were, Liverpool, London, Bristol and New York; and thus again securing, above all rivalry, our importance as the Commercial Emporium. Very many persons too, have had doubts as to the practicability of crossing the ocean by steam power, but these arrivals have dispelled their doubts, and the idea that this city [illegible] be brought within 15 or 20 days of [illegible] naturally engages the thoughts of a large portion of our citizens.

What are to our Merchants and others may [illegible] of this great event, it is not for us to say, but it is an event, at [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and here [illegible] it is only 16 days, [illegible] England [illegible] than many parts of our own country [illegible] been [illegible] of the year, [illegible] of summer sunshine, but of gales, storms, sleet and hail, and thus the Experiment of Steam Navigation across the Atlantic is no longer Experiment but a plain matter of fact. The thing has been done triumphantly. Dr Lardner may reason as philosophically as he pleases, of its impossibility, but here are the ships! It is a Great Event then, we declare it. It is a New Era. Though an ocean parts us, we are linked now with our Father Land. People of the same origin and of the same tongue being parted no longer, but united in a common brotherhood. We hope the event will be celebrated. It is worthy of a festival. Too much cannot be said about it. To the brave Commanders in these Exploring Expeditions, too much praise cannot be awarded, and to the experiment, as one of trade and commerce, too much encouragement cannot be given. Let us have a rational jubilee thereupon, and then go on and build steam ships ourselves, as soon as we can buy the keels or get the machinery.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

[BY THE GREAT WESTERN.]

The splendid steamer Great Western, Lieut Hosken, R N, came up in fine style, at 2 P M yesterday, having sailed from Bristol, England, on the evening of the 7th inst. By her the Editors of the New York Daily Express are put in possession of copious files of Bristol and London papers to Saturday the 7th, and Liverpool of the 5th, together with the latest commercial and shipping intelligence. The Great Western brings us twelve days later than the George Washington and four days later than the Sirius. The money market continued to be abundant. The Mercantile Journal says there has been plenty of money in circulation, and discounts on best bills continued to be low. Prime bills have been far from plentiful. The resumption of specie payments about to take place by the New York Banks on the 10th of May, was an absorbing topic of conversation among all parties connected with the commerce of the United States.

The Coronation is to take place 26th June.

Lord Dalhousie, late Governor General of the Canadas is dead.

Two new Steam Ships are about to come out, of yet larger size than the Great Western.

The British papers are full of discussions upon Slavery, and the Abolition of Slavery in the Colonies.

At a negro Emancipation meeting in Westminster, Mr Wilson proposed that Mr George Thompson be sent into all the towns and boroughs represented by the members of the government who had voted against immediate abolition, such as Stroud, Nottingham and other places, to call on their constituencies to remonstrate with them on their opposition, and to demand at their hands the immediate abolition of slavery. Mr O Connell, who had entered the room while the proposal was being made, opposed this course of proceeding, and moved as an amendment, "That Mr. Thompson do not visit the constituencies of all those members who had voted against the bill.

After some discussion, it was agreed that the matter be left to a select committee of the delegates to be appointed for the purpose.

The meeting afterwards agreed to an expression of sympathy with Lord Brougham, which concluded with an assurance to his Lordship that they would in their various districts, do all in their power to second his exertions in the total abolition of slavery.

TOULON, March 21. The American frigate United States which arrived to-day from Lisbon, has run aground in the road to the west of this town. As soon as the Semaphore gave the signal of this event, men and boats were sent to her aid. Orders were also given to a steam boat to assist in getting the frigate afloat. This is the very same frigate which was at Cadiz when Admiral Lalande's squadron arrived there, and refused the ordinary salute, though the English frigates and the ships of war of other nations saluted the French admiral, and the officers offered him their services. Our readiness to-day seems to show that we have forgotten the uncivil treatment of our flag on the occasion we speak of. [Journal des Debats.

The United States sailed from Toulon the 27th.

FROM SPAIN, we have Madrid dates to the 26th ult.

The Phare de Bayonne, in its correspondence from Navarre, mentions that in order to raise the spirits of the people of the Basque Provinces, the Carlists have spread the report that the "miraculous bird" is on its way, and has reached Puente la Reyne. This bird according to ancient tradition, comes at long intervals, and rests on a hermitage near Estella, being always sent by God as the herald of some fortunate event for the country. It is hence inferred that the war will be brought to an end this spring. The stratagem, has, it is said, had its fullest effect, and the people have become more enthusiastic than ever in the Carlist cause.

POLAND. The Czar has issued an ukase abolishing the distinct existence and the name of Poland, absorbing the kingdom into Russia, and incorporating the Polish troops with the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] of [illegible] Governments of the kingdom of [illegible] and that of Lithuania, anciently [illegible] have ceased to exist [illegible] the inhabitants can pass freely from one country to the other without asking for passports at Warsaw or St. Petersburgh; there are to be no more custom-houses between the governments of Russia and Poland. 2. The term of military service for the Polish recruits is to be 23 years, as in Russia. The children of married soldiers are to belong to the government, and are to be placed in its military schools. 3. The liberty which the Polish peasants enjoy of changing their domicile is abolished. they are to submit to the same rule as Russian peasants.

The Augsburg Gazette, contains a letter from Constantinople of some importance. It states that a treaty of commerce had been signed by the Ottoman Porte with the government of France, Austria and Russia, and that better terms might have been made, had not England raised objections.

A letter dated 14th ult from Beyrout, on the coast of Syria, appears in the Swabian Mercury. Its contents import that the Druses had proved victorious in a late affair with Ibrahim Pacha's lieutenant, and that they had massacred a large body of troops sent against them, which they had drawn into an ambuscade.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

Permit me to express my thanks to you for exposing the deception relative to the "Matchless Sanative." For my own part, I have no doubt that the short history which you gave of it is substantially true. Lottery Tickets happily have been driven out of the market. But the audacity of patent medicine makers and venders has astonishingly increased. Light will most assuredly send the medicine after the Tickets. Long stories I know are inadmissable, so I come directly to the point. The motion has been made and seconded that an anti-pill Society be formed.

Now sir, I move that a notice be published in the Whig and Courier calling on such persons as may think the object worthy attention, to meet for the purpose of taking the subject into consideration, and to determine whether or not it is expedient, to take some measures to expose the delusion, and arrest these most outrageous and destructive impositions.

A CITIZEN.

NEW YORK BANKS. We learn from the N Y Commercial Advertiser, that several of the Banks of that city commenced paying out their own notes on Friday and Saturday last. For several months past they have paid out nothing but safety fund country bank notes.

On Monday morning the banks generally began to pay out their own bills, and though a resumption of specie payments is not yet formally in force, specie, if wanted, might be obtained at any of the banks.

The Banks had all agreed to resume on the 9th of May, and the opinion prevailed that even this time would be anticipated, and that the resumption would take place on the 1st of May.

The New York Banks appear to have been stimulated in their operations by the news that the Boston Banks were paying out specie in exchange for their small bills.

The Journal of Commerce goes still farther than the Commercial Advertiser, and declares that the city banks have resumed specie payments in the broadest extent, bills, deposits and all, and that they pay out their own notes only.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE LATE DUEL

The Committee of the House appointed to investigate the causes which led to the late death of the Hon Jonathan Cilley, and inquire whether in relation to that matter, any breach of the privileges of the House had taken place, after a month's session have at length presented to the House the result of their inquiries and deliberations.

The particular contents of this report, or the bearings of the evidence attached to it, it is impossible to state, because neither the report nor the evidence have been printed, or even read in the House. We only know that it recommends the expulsion of Mr Graves, declares the seconds in the duel to deserve the censure of the House, and pronounces Col Webb to be guilty of a breach of privilege, but recommends that no further notice be taken of him.

The decidedly party aspect, which, from the first this subject was made to assume, will be a great obstacle in the way of any wholesome action upon it in the House.

The death of Mr Cilley was eagerly seized upon by the Tory leaders as means of strengthening a weak and dying cause. He was held up to reverence as a martyr and the Tory journals went into mourning on his death, as though in his person some great hero, sage, or patriot, had been snatched away. The House too, buried him with public honors, and proceeded with regard to him in all respects, as though he had died in the service of his country.

Against these proceedings we protested at the time. These honors paid to a dead duelist were not at all to our taste. In the opinions which we expressed upon this subject we were seconded by many influential journals at home, and we are still more satisfied as to the correctness of those opinions, by finding them concurred in by foreign journals. The London Morning Herald in speaking of the duel says

"The unfortunate deceased was buried in a very pompous, and we may say, theatrical manner, at Washington, on the 27th ult. There is no accounting for taste. We should have thought the more privately the obsequies were conducted, under all the circumstances, the better. But they order these things differently in America."

But it ceases to be a mere question of taste, when one duellist, because he belongs to a particular party, is treated with all tenderness and indulgence, while the whole indignation of the House and the country are reserved for the head of another duellist who belongs to another party.

Reprobation and punishment which are so evidently directed not against the offence, but against the political opinions and party connections of the person aimed at, lose all their moral effect, and are calculated to do much more hurt than good.

WESTERN RAFTS. Perhaps our readers do not precisely understand the scale in which the western waters are ridden down on rafts. The Cincinnati News speaks of one with six or eight cabins upon it, and perhaps thirty or forty men, women, and children. "This raft only wanted a small meeting house, with a spire shooting to the heavens, to make a neat and tidy country village afloat." [N. Y. Sun.

NEEDS [illegible]. The Lockport Balance records [illegible] [illegible] who a couple of weeks since [illegible] the falls of Niagara, and, [illegible] below, landing [illegible] terra firma alive, and not much the worse for his terrific adventure.

Sub-Treasuries with legs. The Louisville Journal gives an [illegible] and not uninstructive account of the mode of operating, practised by a two legged Sub-Treasury of the Government in one of Uncle Sam's western estates.

A special commissioner was directed by the Government to examine the affairs of Ionia land office, in Michigan. Finding only $9,000 in the office, he inquired of the receiver where the ballance was. The receiver replied, that he had $9,000 more deposited at Detroit. The commissioner, not satisfied with this assurance, expressed his determination to go and count the funds at Detroit, and asked the receiver to accompany him. They accordingly started together, but, after proceeding a short distance, the receiver pretending to have forgotten something, requested the commissioner to wait for him, galloped back to Ionia, despatched his $9,000 in specie with all possible haste to Detroit, and then rejoined the commissioner. In due time the two functionaries arrived in Detroit, where the duped commissioner again counted over unconsciously the identical coin that he had previously counted at Ionia. Of course he pronounced every thing right and made his report accordingly to the government. In eight days from that time, the receiver ran away with all the funds in his possession, and has not been heard of since.

THE CHOLERA AND BURIALS AT MARSEILLES. Imagine a space of ground, somewhat exceeding six acres, devoted to the victims of one deadly malady! at first each body was committed singly to the grave: it had its own little spot of earth — its own distinguished cross — its own garland of immortelles. Affection and regret had yet a resting place for the imagination — the tears of tenderness could be wept upon the tomb of the beloved and lost. But this 'luxury of woe," endured not long, the number of victims increased, not only daily but hourly — the city streets became one vast funeral procession — the population which had thronged the walks now crowded the burial place and, too frequently, they who dug the graves died as they hollowed them, and shared them with their employers. Others, as they plied their frightful task, recognised among the victims some friend, or relative, or parent; and with the partial insanity of despair, sickening at the sight of their own hurried and imperfect work, sought to violate the prouder tombs around them, in order to deposit within their recesses the remains of those who had been dear to them! Then came the second and still more revolting stage of the hallucination of misery. It was on one of the most fatal days of the disease — a bright sunshiny morning of July, when the sea and sky were blue and beautiful, and Nature, pranked out in her garb of loveliness, seemed to mock at human suffering, that suddenly as the city groaned with victims, those who had hitherto laden the death cars, and carried them forth to burial, withdrew despairingly from the task, and literally left the dead to bury their dead. For a brief interval the panic was frightful; the scorching heat of the unclouded sun — the rapid effects of the disease upon the bodies, the difficulty of procuring substitutes for the revolting duty, all conspired to excite the most intense alarm, lest the effluvia of putrefaction should be superadded to the miasma which was already feeding the malady. In this extremity, the Mayor of the town addressed himself to three young men, of whose courage and resolution he had a high opinion, and who instantly consented to devote themselves to the preservation of their fellow citizens. The sexton, mourning and hallowing out his narrow space of earth was replaced by workmen flinging up the soil from deep trenches, extending some hundred feet in length, while the courageous trio who had undertaken to transport the bodies, speedily filled up the common grave which was thus prepared for them. The same prayer was murmured over a score — the tinkling of the same little bell marked the service performed for a hundred, whose sealed ears heard not the sound. But that silence was at length rudely and strangely broken. Human nature, wrought up to its last point of endurance, acknowledged no authority — spurned at all duty — and the tools of the work men were cast down as they sprung out of the trenches, and refused to pursue their task. It must have been a frightful scene and one never to be forgotten, when the gleaming of bayonets was apparent within the walls of the grave-yard, and the troops stood silently along the edge of the trenches, partially heaped with dead, compelling, by the mute eloquence of their arms, the labors of the living! And this is a burial place! where all should be still, and solemn, and sacred! The compulsatory work was completed, and I stood yesterday upon this spot of frightful memories, beside the long, deep, common graves of upwards of four thousand of the plague smitten. The sun was shining upon them — insects were humming about them — on those which had been first filled up, the rapid vegetation of this fine climate had already shed a faint tinge of verdure — above them spread a sky of the brightest blue without a cloud — on one side the eye rested on the distant city, and the ear caught the busy hum of its streets; on the other, swelling hills and rich vineyards, stretched far into the distance; but they lay there, long and silent and saddening — the mute records of a visitation which has steeped the city in tears of blood. It was awful as I paused beside these vast tumuli, to remember that two short months had peopled them — to stand there, and to picture to myself the anguish and the suffering, the terror and the despair, amid which they were wrought — to know that within their hidden recesses were piled indiscriminately, the aged and the young, the nursling and the strong man, the matron and the maiden, and above all, it was affecting to trace the hand of surviving tenderness which had planted the record cross, and the tributary wreath, upon some spot of the vast sepulchre, which was believed to cover the regretted one — I say believed, for who could measure with his eye that fatal trench, and make sure note of the narrow space where his own lost one lay, above, or beneath, or in the midst of that hour's victims? Would you endeavor to divest yourself of these revolting images, they are brought back upon you with tenfold force, as you pause at the termination of the trenches; for there your eye falls on a tall black cross, crowned with immortelles, and bearing the inscription

Cholériques du Mois de Juillet.

You turn away with the blood quivering in your veins; and a second cross, wreathed and fashioned like the first, marks the graves of the Cholériques d'Aout et Septembre.

And here, thanks to an all-gracious Providence! the last formed trench yet yawns hollow and empty for full two-thirds of its length. The destroying Angel slowly furls his wings — death glutted with his prey, pauses in his work of devastation. I do not think that I shall again have courage to enter [illegible] cemetery. [illegible] River and the Desert," by Miss Pardoe.]

"Why [illegible]" said Mr. Major [illegible] to a dwarfish young man [illegible] "Why, you aren't right [illegible] [illegible] you look like a boy of ten." "All comes of being a dutiful child." "How so?" "When I was [illegible] [illegible] his hand on my head and said, "Stop there," and he then ran away, I [illegible] never been ... since and didn't think it right [illegible] growing without his leave.

PROSPECTUS OF THE BOSTON MUSICAL GAZETTE. This Journal will be devoted especially to the subject of Music, containing the Musical History, Biographical Sketches of eminent Composers and performers; impartial Reviews of Musical Works, an account of Oratorios, Concerts, Musical Societies, Academies and Schools, with [illegible] various merits, progress, &c. Also, occasional hints and observations on the kindred arts, and matters of taste and general literature, with appropriate Poetical effusions. Each number will likewise contain more or less sacred or secular music, arranged with appropriate accompaniments.

The inhabitants of New England may well be denominated a musical people. And it is thought that a periodical of the above description, if well conducted, would meet with at least a competent support. It is agreed on all hands, we believe, that attention to the art of music was never so great in our country, as at the present day; yet we shall not pretend that science or taste keeps pace with the practice.

A writer in a respectable Journal recently observed, "Our City takes the lead of all others in the Union, both in devotion to Music, and in the Institutions for its perpetuation and improvement." If this be an acknowledged truth, we deem it a circumstance no little favorable to our design.

It is well known that in Boston Music engages the special attention of both the old and young; and it has been thought proper to introduce it, as a suitable branch of education, into some of our public schools, as well as many private seminaries. Surely, then, there is a reasonable expectation that our plan may succeed, and a belief that it could never have commenced more opportunely.

The editorial department will be conducted by B. Brown, Esq. who has the pleasure to state that the following, among other talented gentlemen, will occasionally contribute to its pages: Lowell Mason, G J. Webb, T. Comer, N. Mitchell, J. S. Dwight, T. Power, J. R. Parker.

The work will be published every other Wednesday in the quarto form, of 8 pages to each number, on good type and fine paper, at Three Dollars, per annum, payable in advance.

To the Hon the Senate and House of Representatives, in Legislature assembled,

THE undersigned beg leave to represent that a Boom from Ayer's Island, at Orono, to extend up and across the main Penobscot River through a portion of Ayer's Falls to the eastern shore would greatly accommodate and advantage the Mills and those interested in the manufacture of Lumber at that place, and in case of injury to the boom above or the escape of logs or other lumber, would afford to the owners and others great facilities in the preservation of their property and save to the community a large amount of property which now annually passes down said river into tide waters, or below the mills where they can be safely and advantageously manufactured.

Wherefore we pray your hon body to grant us an Act of Incorporation, with such immunities and restrictions as may seem just and as will subserve the interests aforesaid And as in duty bound will ever pray.

NEW MAGAZINE OF VARIETIES, BENTLEY'S MISCELLANY,

EDITED BY "BOZ," with illustrations by Cruikshank "Never have a periodical more earnestly fulfilled its promises than this hilarious magazine It undertook to be comical, and it is comical almost to a fault. The humor of Boz is humor per se; there is nothing like it, nothing so good in its way, and it would appear that the springs from which it is drawn are inexhaustible [London Atlas]

The extraordinary share of popularity this Periodical is said to have experienced in England under the editorial management of Charles Dickens Esq has led the subscriber to believe that an American edition of a work of such high repute for wit and talent would, in addition to the Reprints of Reviews and Magazines of a character already issued by him be acceptable He therefore respectfully takes leave to announce to the public his determination to commence an American series [illegible] a [illegible] of the original of Bentley's Miscellany with the January number of the present year 1838 and which he may expect to have ready during the month of February

Many editors of journals of acknowledged taste have extracted copiously from the numbers of the Miscellany as they have appeared and the Pickwick Papers, emanating from the pen of the talented editor, is now in course of profitable republication in this country The character of the Work therefore from these circumstances, it may be presumed is so far favorably known as partially to have received the stamp of public approbation which encourages the proprietor to hope that in being the mere humble instrument of presenting the first complete reprint of BENTLEY'S MISCELLANY to the literati of the United States he has not mistaken the public taste; and if his inference in this respect be correct he may, with confidence, look forward to the result.
